

Social and Societal Impacts Across Product Life Cycles

There are increasing efforts to bring social and societal impact evaluation into or along-side life cycle assessments. This session invites contributions relating both to case examples and to proposals/discussions regarding the methodology. Contributors are requested to link methodology and application. That is to say, presentations of case examples should also include at least a brief summary and justification for the method, while method-oriented papers should include at least a simple/illustrative application example.

Instructions for submission of papers will be made available in July 2006 on www.lcm2007.org. Further information regarding the session is available from:
